A "less hawkish" ECB pushed the Euro to its worst day in 16 months !!!

TOP NEWS

ECB slow asset purchases as Draghi sets sights on QE exit

The ECB will reduce its monthly bond purchases next year, a step toward ending a program that has already spent more than 2 trillion euros trying to revive euro-area inflation. Policy makers agreed to scale back buying to 30 billion euros a month starting in January and continue for nine months until the end of September, a decision that was in line with economists' estimates. The ECB also maintained its pledge to continue buying beyond the current deadline and/or increase the size of its monthly asset purchases if needed. The decision marks a watershed moment for Mario Draghi, who heads into the final two years of his ECB presidency after a tenure spent easing policy to contain the fallout from the region's debt crisis and stave off deflation. The 19-nation bloc is on track for its fastest expansion in a decade, and the central bank is betting that inflation is finally on the verge of picking up.

US House clearing path for tax bill with budget approval

The US House of Representatives voted on Thursday to clear a procedural path forward for a Republican tax bill, which was still being written and was expected to be unveiled next week as Trump seeks his first major legislative achievement. Overcoming last-minute resistance from lawmakers in their own ranks, House Republicans approved a fiscal 2018 budget measure that would make enactment of an eventual tax bill easier in the Senate, though many difficult decisions lie ahead.

Japan consumer prices rising for 9th straight month

Japan's core CPI marked a 9th straight month of annual gains in September but failed to accelerate from the previous month, underscoring the central bank's huge task as it struggles to meet an ever-elusive 2% inflation target. Most of September's scant inflation was driven by continued rises in energy costs, which were partly offset by falling cellphone bills - another sign that companies still balk at raising prices for fear of stalling a fragile recovery in private consumption. Still, the Bank of Japan is set to largely maintain its current inflation forecasts at a policy meeting next week, blaming stagnant inflation on factors such as corporate efforts to boost productivity. The nationwide core CPI, which includes oil products but excludes volatile fresh food prices, rose 0.7% in Sept from a year earlier, matching August.

China's Sept industrial profits surging most in nearly 6 years

Profits for China's industrial powerhouses surged the most in nearly six years in September as a gov't crackdown on air pollution sparked fears of winter supply shortages and sent prices of finished goods like steel and copper sharply higher. Sustained earnings growth will give China's policymakers more room to restructure bloated and often inefficient state-owned enterprises, which dominate the industrial landscape and account for a hefty portion of the country's corporate debt. Industrial profits in September rose 27.7% from a year earlier to 662.18 billion yuan ($99.46 billion), accelerating from a 24% jump in August, the NBS said on its website on Friday.

Catalan leader running out of options

Catalonia's tumultuous push for independence is on a knife edge after separatists turned on their leader with Spanish authorities just hours away from getting the political power to crush their movement. Senators in Madrid are expected to pass legislation on Friday allowing PM Rajoy to seize control of everything from the insurgent region's budget to its police force and state-run media. Backed into a corner by his own hardliners and refusal to give him a dignified way out, Catalan Pres. Puigdemont will address regional parliament in Barca as demonstrators clamor for a declaration of independence.

Clariant, Huntsman abandon $20 billion merger

Swiss specialty chemicals maker Clariant and Huntsman have agreed to abandon their proposed $20 billion merger, bowing to a growing number of shareholders who had joined activist investor White Tale to oppose the deal. "Given the continued accumulation of Clariant shares by activist investor White Tale Holdings and its opposition to the transaction, which is now supported by some other shareholders, we believe that there is simply too much uncertainty as to whether Clariant will be able to secure the two-thirds shareholder approval that is required to approve the transaction," the companies said in a joint statement on Friday. Both sides had agreed to forego breakup fees.

CVS makes more than $66 billion bid for Aetna: sources

(Reuters) U.S. pharmacy operator CVS Health Corp (NYSE:CVS) has made an offer to acquire No. 3 U.S. health insurer Aetna Inc for more than $200 per share, or over $66 billion, people familiar with the matter said on Thursday. A deal would merge one of the nation's largest pharmacy benefits managers and pharmacy operators with one of its oldest health insurers, whose far-reaching business ranges from employer healthcare to gov't plans nationwide.

Alphabet's mobile ad revenue surging; shares jump

Alphabet Inc on Thursday reported stronger-than-expected advertising sales and higher operating margins, boosting its shares as investors brushed off concerns about higher costs for acquiring mobile users. The stock was up nearly 3% at $1,001.50 after the bell. They have gained 25% this year. Q3 revenue for Alphabet, the parent company of Google, jumped 24% to $27.8 billion, above the average analysts' estimate of $27.2 billion. Profit of $6.7 billion, or $9.57 per share, was well ahead of Wall Street estimates. While Google faces political pressure, especially in Europe, over its growing dominance and its role in spreading propaganda online, those problems have yet to hit the bottom line.

Microsoft beats profit estimates on gains from cloud services

Microsoft Corp reported better-than-expected quarterly profit on Thursday as demand for its cloud computing services for companies rose and its personal computer software business stabilized. Shares of the world's largest software company rose 3.1% to $81.20 in trading after the bell. Microsoft's focus on fast-growing cloud applications and platforms is helping it beat slowing demand for personal computers that has hurt sales of Windows - the software that powered the company to the top in the 1990s.

Amazon sales surge after Whole Foods acquisition, Prime Day

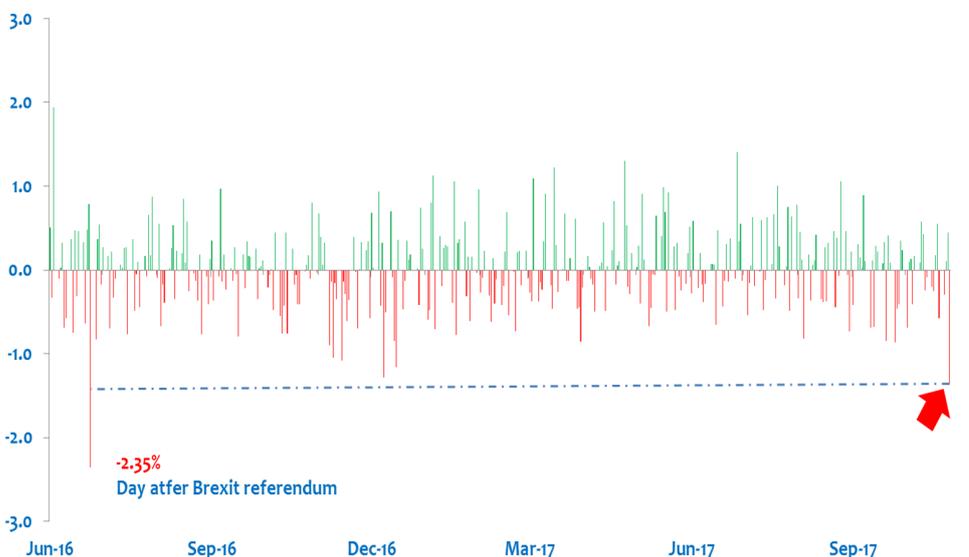

Amazon.com Inc on Thursday said its sales surged over the summer and profit trounced expectations, as shoppers jumped at "Prime Day" promotions on its website and bought groceries at its newly acquired chain of Whole Foods Market stores. Shares rose more than 7% in after-hours trade. Amazon is winning business from older, big box rivals by delivering virtually any product to customers at a low cost, and at times faster than it takes to buy goods from a physical store. It acquired Whole Foods for $13.7 billion in August to help it deliver groceries to shoppers' doorsteps.

Twitter says it could turn first-ever profit, shares surge

Twitter said on Thursday it may become profitable for the first time next quarter after slashing expenses over the past year and ramping up deals to sell its data to other companies, which could help to break its reliance on advertising for revenue. Shares of Twitter soared more than 18% to $20.31 in after-hours trading. The company also said user growth resumed in Q3 after stalling in Q2. Twitter has never had a profitable quarter based on GAAP, but said it "will likely be GAAP profitable" in Q4 if it hits the high end of its estimates.

EUR/USD "Daily Percentage"

The Euro dropped on October 26, -1.37%, its worst day since June 24, the day after the Brexit referendum when the pair fell -2.35%.

This drop was triggered by ECB's stance towards tapering decision, which was considered dovish rather than hawkish. As a result, the markets pushed their rate hike expectations to 2019, after it was in mid-2018.

After almost touching the $1.21 level in early September, the EUR/USD hit today, $1.1616, its lowest since July 26 (3-month low), down almost -4%.

The US dollar stood tall today, on track for weekly gains, underpinned as the U.S. House of Representatives voted on Thursday to clear a procedural path for a Republican tax bill. Investor attention remains on candidates to head the U.S. Federal Reserve when current chief Janet Yellen's term expires in February. Trump is expected to announce his candidate before his upcoming trip to Asia in early November. The greenback's rise against the Japanese yen was limited as the Japanese currency rallied against the euro. The yen showed little reaction to Friday's data revealing Japan's inflation data.

The euro slumped to 3-month lows after the ECB extended its bond purchases and reduced the chances that it would hike interest rates in 2018. The common currency slumped against the greenback as the ECB's cautious approach highlighted the difference between the Fed, which is poised to raise rates in December as it continues to normalize monetary policy.

British pound slipped with investors focused on whether the Bank of England will proceed with its first interest rate increase in more than a decade after its next meeting on Nov. 2.

The Australian dollar fell to 3 1/2-month low after Australia's conservative coalition government lost its one-seat parliamentary majority following a High Court ruling that Deputy Prime Minister Barnaby Joyce is ineligible to remain in parliament. The court has now ordered a by-election for Joyce's seat.

Oil prices inched higher today, with Brent crude approaching $60 a barrel amid tightening market expectations, buoyed by comments from Saudi Arabia's Crown Prince backing the extension of OPEC-led output cuts.

US stocks were mixed yesterday. The Dow and S&P 500 advanced after a round of positive corporate earnings announcements, but gains were curbed and the Nasdaq lost ground on a drop in the healthcare sector. DowDuPont was up 2.8% as the biggest boost to the S&P 500. It forecast Q3 profit well above Wall Street's expectations ahead of the combined company's first earnings report next week. Twitter jumped 18.5% after the company said it could turn its first-ever profit in Q4, helped by cost cuts and new sources of revenue. The healthcare sector, off 1.03%, held gains in check, led lower by a 16% plunge in Celgene, the biggest drag on the S&P 500 and the Nasdaq. The company reported lower-than-expected sales for its psoriasis drug Otezla and lowered its overall 2020 sales outlook. Losses accelerated in the sector after the St. Louis Post-Dispatch reported, citing public records, that Amazon gained approval from a number of state pharmaceutical boards to become a wholesale distributor. In addition, Trump announced steps to fight the opioid crisis in the US by declaring it a national public health emergency. Shares of the online retailer climbed about 6% following the closing bell after its quarterly results. As Q3 earnings season nears the half-way mark, 74% of companies have topped expectations, above the 72% beat rate for the past four quarters. However, earnings growth for the quarter is currently 5.3%, well below the double-digit growth rates of the prior two quarters. With major US indexes at record levels, earnings have been scrutinized to see if they warrant stretched valuations.

Asian shares gained today as technology shares were boosted by upbeat earnings from US high-tech giants. Australia's S&P/ASX200 fell about 0.6% after the news of Joyce's disqualification. Japan's Nikkei gained 1.24% while MSCI's broadest index of Asia-Pacific shares outside Japan gained 0.3%, with Hong Kong shares leading gains.

Gulf stock markets were largely flat yesterday on the back of steady oil prices, but exchanges in Dubai and Abu Dhabi shed some value, dragged down by some companies missing investors' expectations.
